HOWEVER nebulous the details of the arbitration scheme outlined by Mr. Lavon yesterday, ARBITRATION approved by a majority of the Histadrut Central Committee against Abduh Ha'aveda and Mapam votes, it is a step forward in several respects. As proposed, a panel of arbitrators is to be set up in conjunction with the Ministry of Labour and, when called upon by employees, to appoint appropriate three-man commissions to rule on labour disputes. Once summoned into action, its decisions will be binding on all sides. Despite the general terms in which the plan has been proposed, it is intended specifically for the solution of the current claims of the secondary school teachers for better pay and conditions. These do not enjoy the support of the Histadrut, which also refuses to recognize the teachers' association as a separate from the general teachers' union, the great majority of whose members, of course, work in primary schools. The Government, as the teachers' employer, has hesitated to recognize their organization as long as its independence is not recognized. The teachers' association has flatly rejected by the Histadrut. The teachers, for their part, have refused to accept the Histadrut's judgment of their claims, nor yet the ruling produced by the Government-appointed Guri Committee many months ago. Mr. Ben-Gurion, the Minister of Education, has tried to bridge the gap by means of personal contacts, but the progress achieved could not be consolidated for lack of a proper forum.

Arbitration Board For Labour Disputes

Jerusalem Post Labour Correspondent

TEL AVIV. — The Mapai majority in the Histadrut Central Committee yesterday proposed the formation of a permanent commission for settling labour disputes. This body would be composed equally of representatives of the Histadrut, employers and public representatives.

The proposal, tabled by Histadrut Secretary-General Pinhas Lavon and the head of the Trade Union Department, Mr. Aharon Becker, was not submitted to a formal vote. The decision will be formalized next week.

Mr. Lavon explained that the proposal emerged after a series of talks with Finance Minister Levi Eshkol and Education Minister Abba Eban.

This meeting followed one between Mr. Eshkol, Mr. Eban and Mr. Ben-Gurion at which the Prime Minister readily agreed to accept the plan for a commission. Mr. Ben-Gurion had earlier wanted a non-partisan arbitration tribunal whose rulings would have the force of law.

The compromise scheme now requires approval by the Histadrut, the Manufacturers Association and the Government before it is implemented.

Involves Sacrifice. Mr. Becker charged that Mr. Ben-Gurion's plan would have involved the sacrifice of freedom of negotiation for various professions, and the Histadrut rejected this. The new scheme actually followed the lines of Histadrut policy and action, he said.

Mr. Becker explained that a list of arbitrators acceptable to all three constituents would be drawn up. Application for arbitration will be voluntary for the parties to a dispute, but, having been sought, the arbitrator's verdict will be binding.

Mr. B. Repetov of Abduh Ha'aveda and Mr. Y. Yudin of Mapam objected to the proposed scheme on the grounds that it would interfere with "free trade-unionism."

Mr. Y. Shavit of Ha'aveda's Histadrut branch objected to the compulsory arbitration in labour disputes in the essential services, including medicine and the schools. This was not a popular proposal, however, as the situation had become so grave that the most highly qualified workers in this country, collectively speaking, have so little sense of public and national responsibility that an instrument created by means of coercion could be coerced. Possibly Mr. Ben-Gurion did not really expect so extreme a proposal to be accepted; it would certainly have involved the abdication of the Histadrut from its prerogatives in a most sensitive field.

What is in effect a counter-proposal presented by Mr. Lavon, the Secretary-General of the Histadrut, is both less and more than what the Prime Minister sought. Instead of being restricted to the essential professions, arbitration is to be extended to all employees when necessary; on the other hand it is not to be compulsory, but undertaken only at the request of the employees.

It is quite clear that, from this point on, even if the arbitrators are chosen, the degree of their independence, and the extent to which they are acceptable to their customers. The teachers' association has been quick to voice fears that their case will be laid before a group in which the employees will be represented by the Histadrut, which does not recognize them, the employers by the Government, with which they are quarrelling, while Mr. Lavon has already announced with regard to the "third man" that "a public personality is not necessarily one unconnected with the Histadrut." The Minister of Education is said to have assurances that the commission will be widened to five on this occasion to allow for the particular difficulties of the situation, and that the teachers will get a fair hearing. There is reason to believe that the entire scheme represents a tangible step forward toward settling the problem.

Whether the arbitration board will establish itself as a permanent institution is another question. If it becomes a largely Histadrut-guided body, it will be able to do little more than the mediation department of the Ministry of Labour has done in the past; and it is difficult to see where the manpower can be found to give Gossypian rulings that will be accepted by the Government, the Histadrut, the manufacturers and the workers.

Special Cabinet On Teachers Tuesday

Jerusalem Post Staff

TEL AVIV. — The Cabinet is to hold a special session tomorrow in an effort to settle the teachers' trade union dispute.

With the acceptance by the Histadrut majority of a scheme for arbitration in labour disputes, it is believed the Cabinet will discuss the scheme which, if accepted by all parties concerned, may well relieve the Government of all further responsibility.

But a snag has already been struck with the announcement last night by the Secondary School Teachers Association that they find the proposal for an arbitration commission to be unacceptable. They say this is because the Histadrut still withholds recognition from the Association and "its members thus cannot sit on such a commission to be their judges."

They expressed regret that the Prime Minister's idea of a compulsory arbitration in certain professions, including teachers, had been changed beyond recognition and that Education Minister Abba Eban's efforts at conciliation "have been wasted."

Nevertheless, Mr. Abba Eban, Minister of Education, will at a meeting with Association heads today endeavor to convince them that acceptance of the arbitration commission will provide the best available solution to their grievances.

The Association's Council is to meet on Thursday, when its members will be holding a day-long protest strike.

Brundt Surprised: Israel Youth Wants Contacts

FRANKFURT (Reuter). — The Mayor of West Berlin, Mr. Willy Brandt, said yesterday he had been surprised how much Israel youth wanted to take up a contact with young Germans uninhibited by the events of the past.

Mr. Brandt said this on his return from a 10-day tour of Greece, Italy and Israel, where he had addressed the Congress of the International Union of Local Authorities.

Lebanese Vessel Held and Released

TEL AVIV. — A Lebanese vessel which was detained in Israeli territorial waters on Sunday evening.

The crew consisted of Syrian and Lebanese sailors. The 100-ton boat was on its way from Beirut to Gaza with a cargo of building iron, potatoes, apples, and meat.

Israel Fishers To Be Freed By Ankara Amnesty

ANKARA (Reuter). — The five Israeli fishermen recently sentenced to five years imprisonment for fishing in Turkish territorial waters will be freed under an amnesty law being promulgated today. It was officially announced yesterday. Amnesty arrangements will be completed within the fortnight.

Colonel Sami Kevrek, a member of the ruling National Union Committee, said the last order which about 20,000 Turkish prisoners will be freed — will also apply to foreign nationals convicted for fishing in Turkish territorial waters.

Another Government spokesman confirmed expressly that the amnesty applies to the Israeli, adding that although the Turkish fishermen will be freed — will also apply to foreign nationals convicted for fishing in Turkish territorial waters.

The Israeli fishermen, who manned the trawler Shavit, were sentenced to five years imprisonment and three years' exile by a Turkish court at Sifit early this month. An appeal against the sentence is pending in the Ankara Supreme Court.

The new law virtually pardons all convicted criminals except murderers of relatives. Life imprisonment is replaced by 24 years' imprisonment.

European Union Committee last week yesterday to take up diplomatic posts abroad, making a total of 11 sent away in the past two days.

Among Saturday's departures was Colonel Alpaslan, Turkish leader of the disbanding of the 10th division, who was assigned to New Delhi.

U.S. to Ask Bonn To Lay Out $1,500m.

BONN. — The U.S. will ask West Germany to provide exactly $1,500m. in loan aid and credits, according to West European defense, reliable sources said yesterday.

This confirmed a hint by President Eisenhower that a reported West German offer of between $500 m. and $600m. would not suffice to stem the drain on American dollar and gold reserves.

Informants said U.S. Secretary of the Treasury Robert Anderson and Under-Secretary of State Douglas Dillon would make the request at the U.S.-West German economic talks scheduled to begin at the Chancellery here today. Mr. Anderson yesterday conferred with the American Ambassador to Bonn, Mr. Walter Dowling, in preparation for the talks.

U.S. officials would not comment on the report.

Macmillan, Fanfani Open Talks Today

LONDON (Reuter). — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan leaves by air today for Rome for his first official visit to Rome since World War II. He will be accompanied by the Foreign Secretary, the Earl of Home.

European trade problems are expected to be in the forefront of the discussions which Mr. Macmillan will have with Mr. Amintore Fanfani, the Italian Prime Minister, before he returns to London on Thursday.

Diplomatic circles hope that the British and Italian leaders will find themselves in full agreement and give a total of 11 sent away in the past two days.

Japan Returns Ikeda Regime To Power

TOKYO (Reuter). — With the issue decided in 299 out of the 467 seats in the House of Representatives, Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda's Liberal Democratic Party had won 266 of them in the Japanese general election last night.

The main opposition, the Socialists, had won 96 seats. The Democratic Party had won 233 seats and the Socialists 122 in the last Diet. The Democratic Party took 46 seats with them when they split away from the Socialists 12 months ago in protest against the latter's alleged pro-Communist line.

The Tory lead was based on unofficial counting in 96 of the country's 118 electoral districts.

A total of 29,951,119 men and women cast their ballots out of 54,292,297 eligible to do so. 75.4 per cent of the electorate turned out for the last general election in 1953.

Mr. Ikeda dissolved Parliament in October, specifically asking Japanese voters to boost his party's strength in the House as a repudiation of neutrality and endorsement of the security treaty providing for American troops in Japan for another decade.

U.S. Envoy, Musician Arrive in Katanga

ELIZABETHTOWN (Reuter). — Mr. Miles Tomblin, President of the breakaway Congo State of Katanga, yesterday received two ambassadors of U.S. goodwill.

The first to arrive was John Lewis ("Satchmo") Armstrong, paying a three-day visit to Katanga.

The second ambassador was Mr. Richard Hughes, citing intelligence sources in Tokyo, that the explosion would be at least as large as France's 1953 atomic test.

The usually well-informed paper said in a report from its Far East Correspondent, Mr. Richard Hughes, citing intelligence sources in Tokyo, that the explosion would be at least as large as France's 1953 atomic test.

Mr. Hughes said there was evidence the Chinese had revised their programme, which had scheduled production of atomic first stage bomb by the end of 1952. He claimed this had now been "speeded up by 12 months under a secret priority directive of the Chinese politburo."

3-Way Coalition Sought for Laos

VIETNAME (AP). — Neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma announced yesterday that he has signed a joint agreement with Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, on ways to end Laos' six-year-old civil war.

The joint declaration, apparently a preliminary agreement in principle only, was announced by Prince Souvanna on his return from the northern Pathet Lao stronghold of Sam Neua.

Prince Souvanna said he and Prince Souphanouvong also agreed to a new coalition government would include representatives of the Pathet Lao and General Phoumi Nosavan's pro-Western rebel regime in Savannakhet.

Formation of a coalition government requires the blessing of King Savang Vatthana in Luang Prabang, which was asked by Gen. Phoumi's forces last week.

No Details. Prince Souvanna said he and Prince Souphanouvong reached "unanimous agreement" but he declined to give details of the agreement until it is published, possibly today. Prince Souphanouvong, a half-brother of the Premier, agreed to support the Government's neutralist policies, Prince Souvanna said.

The inclusion of representatives of Gen. Phoumi in the projected coalition government appeared to be a surprise. The Pathet Lao and the Phoumi regime have refused to have anything to do with each other, and it is considered highly unlikely that either would agree to serve in the same government.

During Prince Souvanna's two-day absence in Sam Neua, the positions of both Gen. Phoumi's regime and the Pathet Lao have hardened to a seemingly irreconcilable point.

The Pathet Lao Radio and Savannakhet Radio — voices of Gen. Phoumi's regime — during the weekend exchanged recriminations and boasts of strength and popular support.

General Phoumi's regime, Prince Souvanna's former Commander-in-Chief who fled to Savannakhet last week, also broadcast a declaration over Savannakhet Radio announcing his defection to Gen. Phoumi.

AMMAN Bombing Trial To Open December 3

AMMAN (Reuter). — The Special State Security Court will meet here on December 3 to start the trial of 18 persons accused of complicity in the bomb attack on the Jordan Foreign Ministry offices on August 29. It was officially announced here yesterday.

Prime Minister Haya Ma'ali and 11 others died in the bombing and 41 persons were injured.

The charges, issued last Sunday, allege that the Syrian Deoudine Bureau (Intelligence Service) instigated the attack.

Major Mohammed Kilani, the Military Prosecutor-General, will lead the prosecution. The Court will hear evidence from 43 prosecution witnesses.

The President of the Court yesterday issued a call for Amman Radio ordering seven suspects known to have fled Jordan to present themselves in Court or else be tried in absentia. They are known to include two Lt.-Colonels of the Deoudine Bureau.
